OEI no 69–70
ON FILM

REDAKTörER FÖR OEI # 69–70
Martin Grennberger och Daniel A. Swarthnas

ARBETSGRUPP FÖR OCH MONTAGE AV OEI # 69–70
Martin Grennberger, Cecilia Grönberg, Jonas (J) Magnusson, Daniel A. Swarthnas

PRODUKTION
Cecilia Grönberg och Jonas (J) Magnusson

FORMGIVNING
PWR Studio

TACK
Marcus Eberhardt (Österreichisches Filmmuseum), Emma Gradin (som också översatt förordet), Isis Marina Graham, Tayna Granados, Scott Hammen, Régis Hébrard, Katt Hernandez, Andreas Holmström, George Jepson, Jon och Lina Karlung, Anna-Karin Larsson (Filform), Lightcone, Anna, Lina och Tua Nordenström, Anna Nyström, Lauren Pirritano, Maria Reis, Karin Slättne, Milka Taanila och alla medverkande.

BILDER OCH DOKUMENT
Lightcone s. 1–32, 49–58 (o Rose Lowder); s. 488 (o Cécile Fontaine).

Filform – the art film and video archive s. 61, 76–86, 93 (o Gunvor Nelson); s. 101–105 (o Filform); 112–128 (o Sven Elfström); 132–136 (o Svenska Filminstitutet, SF); s. 148–141 (o Carl och Karin Slättne); s. 153–159, 174–177 (o Jon och Lina Karlung); s. 321 (o Robert Haller); s. 326–328 (o Carl Henrik Svenstödt); s. 343–353 (o Olof Hedman); s. 370–376 (o Maria och Leo Reis); s. 485–488 (o Anna, Lina och Tua Nordenström).

Övriga: s. 62–64, 66–69 (o Gunvor Nelson); s. 98–91 (o Gunvor Nelson, o Mats Holmström, o Bill Menken, o Dorothy Wiley); s. 279–307 (o Claus Söderquist); s. 334, 337 (o Ronald Nameh, all rights reserved); s. 357 (o Kiasma – Contemporary Art Museum), s. 359 (o Kias Engvall); s. 379–384 (o Maria och Leo Reis); s. 396 (o Ute Aurand); s. 487 (o Neil Henderson); s. 468 (o Régis Hébrard).

Tidskriften OEI

Huvudredaktör: Jonas (J) Magnusson

Redaktör och bildredaktör: Cecilia Grönberg

Kontakt:
red@oei.eu
jjm@oei.eu bildred@oei.eu
www.oei.eu

Tidskriften OEI
Lövholmsgränd 12
117 43 Stockholm
PG 360005-6

Prenumeration ett år: meccenatprenumeration 109 000 kr.

För prenumeration kontakta:
Nätverkstan Ekonomitjänst
Box 31120
408 32 Göteborg
Tel. 831-743 99 05
ekonomitjanst@nätverkstan.net

Producerad med stöd av Statens Kulturråd och med infrastrukturerelt stöd från Tidskriftverkstaden i väst

Issl: 14045995
Isbn: 978-51-85903-75-1

Tryck: Göteborgstryckeriet

Grundare av OEI: Jonas (J) Magnusson
Jesper Olsson, Anders Lundberg
Innehållsförteckning / Contents

1. Rose Lowder - Notebooks for Bouquet
2. Förord/Introduction
3. Innehållsförteckning/Contents
41. Abigail Child - Invisibility
45. Abigail Child - POY
46. Rose Lowder - Improvised composition of the film image in the camera
52. Enrico Camporesi - A filmic exploration by means of botanical imagery: Notes on Rose Lowder
61. Gunvor Nelson - Notes for True to Life
65. Lynne Sachs - Fine and Light: Gunvor Nelson's Vision of Editing
66. Gunvor Nelson - On editing
73. Daniel A. Swarthnas - Gunvor Nelson och différencte montage
82. Daniel A. Swarthnas - Segmenterad helhet - samtal med Gunvor Nelson
95. Sandra Davis - For Gunvor Nelson
99. What triggers this kind of filming? Talk between Gunvor Nelson and Else Marhöfer
101. Svensk experimentfilmstudio/Arbetsgruppen för film
112. Sven Elsterström - Vem äger staden
129. John Sundhölm - Bo Jonsson och glasmaks aestetik
152. Bo Jonsson - Dokument fängvård
157. Lars Gustaf Andersson - Film och Antifilm: antekningar om Carl Slättne
140. Carl Slättne - En Film-En AntiFilm-En Film
142. Anders Karlin - Filminstabilitet och professionell amatör: spår efter svensk situationistisk
143. Filmsituationistisk festival 1965
144. Carl Slättne - Bland maskar och enskilda kriterier
145. Jörgen Leth - Det gfkfulla postorder-landet: utflykt till Skåne
146. Sture Johannesson och Jörgen Næs - ur En decollagefilm om den konfektionerade människan
153. Åke Karlson - affischer och andra arbeten
161. Teddy Hultberg - Ake Karlsson: experiment mot alla odds
172. Även ur en skittuna kan man sjunga en hymn till renheten - UF von Strauß träffar Ake Karlsson med en bandspelare
178. Alexander de Cuveland - Dan Lageryd, Centered
180. Dan Lageryd - 59°28'34"N 18°00'33"E - 59°17'45"N 18°00'11"E
184. Anna Adahl - Crowded excercises i

Bruce McClure - Performance notes
John Skoog - The Roundup
Pavel Lavi - Boredom
Barbara Hammer - Abstract Strategies: A Tendency
Guy Sherwin - Live Cinema: Sound and Image
Dominique Noguez - Vad är experimentfilmin?
Alain-Alcide Sude - Skiss till en reflektion över en filosofi för en "excentrisk konst" historia Emilie Vergy - Jeune, dure et pure: En historia för avantgardofilm och experimentfilmin i Frankrike. Programcuratering som film- och tänkande kring film: en glad audiovisuell vetenskap
Jean Painlevé - Med flötterna i vattnet
Fernand Deligny - Det som inte syns
Intervju med Carmelo Bene - Thierry Lounas
Alberto Grifi - På sexiotalet, vid den tid då jag och...
Stefan Ramstedt - Filmen som civilisation: om Yervant Gianikian och Angela Ricci Luchii Pier Paolo Pasolini - 1 februari 1975. Artikel om eldflugorna Carole Contant och Eric Thounenel - Duellen mellan eldflugor och gatlamor för att erövra natten
"Teckens kontinent". Samtal med Frédérique Devaux - Carole Contant & Eric Thounenel
Claes Söderquist - Kristall
Claes Söderquist - Epitaf
Att programmera experimentfilmin i Sverige 1988-1991 - ett samtal mellan Claes Söderquist, Martin Grenberger och Daniel A. Swarthnas
Jonas Mekas - A word from the curator
Jonas Mekas - From The Film-Makers Cinematheque
Carl Henrik Svensstedt - Up the country! Mars 1968
On Warhol's the Exploding Plastic Inevitable - a talk between Ronald Nameth och Martin Grenberger
E.A.T. and the Moving Image, A conversation between Barbara Rose och Adeena Mey
Martin Grenberger - Olla Hodman

39
Olle Hedman - Scenbeskrivning, Roma
Bengt af Klintberg - om Rosalduna blommor på vattnet
Mika Tsanila - Spindrift: utopin om den rena televisionen
Jan Bark - ur manuskript till Spindrift
Tris Vonna-Michell - Notes on Finding
Chopin: Dans l’Essex
Lina Selander - Document and image
Leo Reis - Metamorfoser, Råta vinklars puls, Optical architecture
Teddy Brunius - Optical architecture
by Leo Reis
Martin Grenberger in conversation with Peter Gidal
Robert Beavers - Anode
A conversation between Ute Aurand and Robert Beavers about Terzen
Rosa Barba - A Fictional Dictionary
Peter Hutton - New York portrait part 3 and Skagafröjordur
Nicky Hamlyn - Neil Henderson’s Three
Studies in Geography
Caroline Koebel - Mattuschka and Pucill: These Films Cannot Be Proved
Henry Hills - ur Making Money
Frank Kuenstler - from Lens Bruce Andrews/Frank Kuenstler - And for anything that I could call my own thinking
Jean-Francois Lyotard - Ofilm Kim West - The Darty Report: images of the administered world Hartmut Bitomsky - Filmerna. produktionen av rikedom och de fattiga konsumenterna
Peter Nestler - Korta anmärkningar
Jean-Marie Straub - Likt Cézanne, som inte gjorde annat än målade äpplen
Lina Selander and Oscar Mangione -
L’Ancien tribunal
Marion Naccache - Arpoador
Elke Mannhöfer - Nicolas Guillen
Landrián
Nicola Brenez - Raymonde Carasco:
Thought as celebration
Raymonde Carasco - Kinematografin.
Filmen och fragmentets krav
Raymonde Carasco - Andra resan
Martin Grenberger - A few scattered notes on the work of Cécile
Fontaine
A nexus of visual and conceptual energy: a talk between Ernie Gehr and Martin Grenberger Anders Karlín - På ett lutande plan i associationsvärlden: Hans Nordenströms efterlämnade filmfragment
Hans Nordenström - Kinetografiska
skisser
Kolofon
MATTUSCHKA AND PUCILL: THESE FILMS CANNOT BE PROVED
Caroline Koebel

Early 1990s NYC was fertile ground for a young experimental filmmaker just out of college in terms of both the diverse local no-budget cinema and the spirited works finding their way across the Atlantic from such artists’ organizations as sixpackfilm in Vienna and London Filmmakers’ Co-op. Mara Mattuschka and Sarah Pucill in particular challenged—and inspired—me and my peers on the moving image border as formidable European artists sowing vast labor for the female sexuality and aesthetics collective research bank.

Affirming curiosity over authority as a tool for dialog, this text courts the fragmentary, the fissure, the blunder, and the gape. Initially imagining a focus on the very films, such as Mattuschka’s S.O.S. Extraterrestre (1993) and Pucill’s Backcomb (1995), that had been so influential to me in the ’90s, instead—in light of learning about other titles through my current research—I have puzzled out alternate points of entry.

Mattuschka’s Pascal-Gödel (1986, 16mm, b/w, silent, 5 min) and Pucill’s Mirrored Measure (1996, 16mm, b/w, sound, 10 min) are each a cocoon encasing a singular inwardly referencing cinematic world, and each a communicative act affirming a passage outward from the profilmic to the viewer. While there is a tempting delirium to getting lost within, there is likewise a provocative dare to hold one’s ground and keep one’s wits from outside the respective diegetic scope. Like the theorems of the mathematicians (after whom Mattuschka names her film) Blaise Pascal and Kurt Gödel, there is a certain undecidability, incompleteness, and self-prophesying riddling these films whose muses as experiments in cinema ripple.

Of painting’s “tendency towards abstraction” after cubism Peter Wollen writes, “the work of art could be defended in terms of objecthood, pure presence: it could be explained as a solution to a problem, often set by the relationship between a signifier and its physical, material support.” It is this “presence,” this “solution to a problem,” this “relationship between a signifier and its material support” that causes Pucill and Mattuschka’s films to be so evocative and so ungraspable (always creating trails of cinematic scents, always slipping away to other time and space dimensions).

Repeated viewings of the two markedly different films gradually reveal their affinities and resonances. Consider, for example, that their opening sequences both feature ritualistic preparations for the actions to follow.

In Pascal-Gödel a hand reaches into the frame to unfurl a backdrop of black-and-white squares. The next instance cropped-headed and science lab-coated Mimi Minus (the director Mattuschka’s onscreen alter-ego) spreads more of the hand-painted tile material onto a table, immersing herself in seemingly infinite checkerdom.

Framing the frame, distancing devices, gender performativity, masquerade, the doppelgänger, institutional verses domestic spheres, hypnotic and hallucinatory, oniric and expressionistic: deceptively concise and expeditious, the sequence elicits a flood of associations and primes viewers for competing states of disorientation and equilibrium. By setting a multivalent context through an economy of means, Pascal-Gödel excites a spectatorship characterized by questioning, problem-solving, and imaginative play.

If the Minus character’s actions evince slippages between a clinical procedure and an impromptu picnic, the laying of cloth on a table in Mirrored Measure reads more unequivocally as single-purposed (i.e. in preparation for formal dining). That is, until the action registers as so riddled by contradiction and paradox that the sequence veers in the direction of dialectical montage (in which one image undergoes radical transformation by its juxtaposition with the next).

Pucill achieves this effect not by combining images taken by a camera that has traveled near and far, but by a camera that has “seen it all,” but rather by looking exhaustively at an otherwise claustrophobically delimited space. Laying cloth on table, snatching it away, revealing wood underneath, relaying the cover, dragging it away, covering the wood again, smoothing cloth with hands, brushing up against it, pushing in chairs, accompanied by a screeching intermittent soundtrack: what is easily recognizable as a quotidian task (albeit with connotations of the bourgeois class) becomes so removed from any set reference points that its existence on a level of abstraction initiates free range meaning.

Fraught with tension through a complex symbolism of form and content (and recalling Wollen) a widening of the referent and its material expression, Mirrored Measure sets its own internal logic that to act is to react, to create is to negate, to rise is to fall, to fill is to empty. Water in pitcher, hands passing and pouring and lifting, glass to lips, wetness, arrhythmic sound, clashing noise, pause, performers in close-ups of mouths, chins, necks, thighs, arms, a younger woman, an older woman, continuous shifts between parts of performers (i.e., from the younger’s smooth hand to the older’s lined mouth). Here is a cosmos of force and counterforce, thesis and antithesis, relief and shadow, rejuvenation and degeneration, the palpable and the intangible. Pucill’s deft use of synecdoche and montage further underscores her intimacy with cinema’s contours for shaping the real.

Both Pucill and Mattuschka conceive cinema as a meeting place for a multitude of expressive modes and a bridge between the visual and performing arts. Each foregoes strictures of linearity in favor of exploring the recursive and circular, the spatiotemporal shape of their filmmaking a spiraling interiority (but, as suggested earlier, an inwardness full of connective tissue to the outside). Note, however, that they do not waylay narrative altogether; the films in question convey a sense of progression over time. The ostensible sequence of events, “the story” in crudest terms, of Mirrored Measure is a multigenerational cast of women drinking water together around a formal dining table; Pascal-Gödel has Mimi Minus imbibing a large bottle of wine on her own while using it as a chess piece.

Amidst a rapid stutter of positive and negative picture, live action and animation, still life and moving image, abstraction and representation, painting and photomechanical reproduction, Mattuschka-Minus, centered and frontal, grabs the bottle by its neck, holds it to her mouth, rests it on the squares, clutches it from the bottom, drinks from it, confronts the camera. In terms of its steely web of humor, audacity, and sociocultural resistance, Pascal-Gödel shares affinities—from Ester Krumbachová’s lively and resourceful sets to the two protagonists both named “Marie”—with Daisies (1966), the trailblazing film of female emancipation by Czech director Vera Chytilová.

Whereas in other of her films (e.g. Nabel Fabel, Kaiserschnitt, Beauty and the Beast) Mattuschka images the incontrovertibly feminine body, in Pascal-Gödel she presents a conspicuously androgynous female self—absent is nudity, absent is biological “proof.” However, it is the very play of gender, the irreverence toward conventional femininity that makes Minus’s advance to drunkenness so potent. In her staging of mind over matter, Mattuschka not only appropriates the masculine-identified role of the asexual but also sends up notions of masculinist creation in the arts and sciences, whether pillars of 1960s Viennese Actionism and 1970s Conceptualism or the historical figures of her film title.

Wandering from the bottle as a sole intoxicating source (and indeed emptying it), Mimi Minus—the movement of her hands now more expressive than functional—touches her lips, uncurls her fingers, holds her face, rubs her eyes, and massages her skull. Departing her crisp checker cloth origins (however campy its touch of faux), the protagonist is sited—both as subject and object—more and more within the moist and malleable realm of painting (“action painting” dare I suggest?). Rigor and precision fall away to hands smearing paint and pigment traveling in all directions—the physical self as pure kinesthesia, an agent of creation, the signifying sensory.

This letting go, this revelry in a lack of control, this unmitigated energy, this sense of abandon mounts too in Pucill’s far more measured Mirrored Measure. From technical deviations (e.g., grease pencil edit marks, blurred focus) through a storm of motion within the frame (e.g., swirling and convulsing water in the otherwise benign vessels of the pitcher and glasses) to a grand topping of the image in which all that is raised comes crashing down, to the culminating close-up of the work’s first and only eye (a finger collects pooling water and disperses tears) a totemic negation arises, impossible to resist—perhaps because it engulfs any will to name it, perhaps because it intimates a calm and tranquility heretofore unknown.

NOTE
Martuschka and Pucill: these files cannot be proved - Caroline Noebel

Sarah Pucill, Mirrored Measure (1996)
Mara Mattuschka, Pascal-Gödel (1988)